Doughnut shop customer throws coffee at worker

Man wearing a suit throws hot beverage at Fresh Donuts cashier over $2.25 sandwich Audio on surveillance video captures clerk's shriek

PHILADELPHIA POLICE DEPARTMENT

▶ This guy lost his cool, then took it out on a clerk at a Fresh Donuts on Lancaster Avenue.

Police are looking for a man who threw scalding coffee on a doughnut shop employee in West Philadelphia during an argument Tuesday afternoon, causing her to suffer severe burns.

The man placed an order at Fresh Donuts on Lancaster Avenue shortly after 11 a.m., police said. In surveillance footage, a woman tells him he owes $2.25 and he responds, "I paid you." She says "no" and he becomes agitated and answers, "Young lady, do I look like I'm going to steal two dollars from you guys here?"

"You not pay me yet," she says. "Here's the change you gave me for the ten dollars I gave you. You count it up yourself," he says, throwing money on the counter.

"You're losing your mind," he says to the woman when she refuses. "I paid you for my sandwich, lady. ... I don't need two dollars and twenty five cents or whatever you charged me."

"I paid her and she told me I didn't. So she can take that and keep the sandwich."
SUSPECT

He turns to a man standing near the doors who police said accompanied him to the store. "This b— talkin' about I didn't pay nothing," he said. "Do you believe this s—? Yo, I paid you for my stuff, b—," he yells as the second man joins him up front.

Someone attempts to hand a cup over the counter and the man grabs it and hurls it directly at them, eliciting a high-pitched scream. Police said the hot coffee caused the employee to suffer severe burns. "You take that and clean that," the man says, turning toward the door.

A male employee appears to try to reason with him as he leaves. "I paid you for my s— and she gonna take my money?" the suspect yells. "I don't give a f—, I paid her and she told me I didn't. So she can take that and keep the sandwich."

Well-dressed, but not well-mannered

Police describe the tall, well-dressed suspect as a 6-foot-1-inch to 6-foot-2-inch, 200-pound, mustachioed black man in his 40s. He arrived in a tan or gold Cadillac with the second man seen in the video, who was wearing a blue button-down, a tan sport coat, dark-colored pants and shoes and a green baseball cap.

The suspect was clad in a tan suit and tie and wore gold glasses, tan shoes and a gold watch.

Outdoor feeding ban to have hearings

PHILADELPHIA. Councilwoman Jannie Blackwell's resolution authorizing the Committee on Housing, Neighborhood Development and the Homeless to hold hearings about the impact of Mayor Michael Nutter's controversial public feeding ban finally passed after being held on several dates.

Advocates pleaded for Council to take action against the ban last week, leading Councilman Jim Kenney to interrupt public testimony and make some clarifications.

"I think part of what's happening is people think we did something or can make the mayor take it away," he said. "Most members of Council don't agree with this sentiment, anyway. ... I want people to understand we didn't do this. Maybe we ought to move the podium down to the second floor so people can express their opinions to [the mayor]." METRO/AW

Horsing around
A central Pennsylvania man arraigned Wednesday for allegedly breaking into a barn and having sex with a horse told police who responded to the scene at 1:30 a.m. that he was there looking for a job, according to The Patriot-News of Harrisburg. Jeremy Johnson, 20, is charged with burglary and sex acts against animals.

Lawmaker luring local companies

PHILADELPHIA. Councilwoman Blondell Reynolds Brown introduced a bill Thursday that would change how the city awards contracts by doubling the bidding preference for Philadelphia-owned firms from 5 percent to 10 percent.

"The ideal model for generating more revenue for city is not raising taxes, but creating more taxpayers through local job creation," she said. "This measure will help tilt the scale to the local firms, ensuring Philadelphia taxpayer dollars are going to support Philadelphia companies, creating jobs and growing the local economy." METRO

Jiffy Lube worker shot to death

PORT RICHMOND. Authorities are looking for a man who shot and killed a Jiffy Lube employee at his work on the 3600 block of Aramingo Avenue last night.

Police said the man, 40, was working on a customer's car around 5:40 p.m. when another man approached him and an argument began. The suspect then shot the worker in the head while he was seated inside the vehicle.

The victim's identity has not yet been released and no arrests have been made. METRO/AW

Tow this! Council may ease PPA pains

Councilman Jim Kenney introduced a measure Thursday that would make it easier to recoup fees if a car is towed in error, one of several pieces of legislation to recently come out of Council aimed at alleviating the need for residents to face long waits at the city Bureau of Administrative Adjudication.

Police impound vehicles when they are pulled over during a "Live Stop" and their driver lacks valid proof of registration. If it turns out that the seizure was in error, which sometimes occurs when a car is registered in a different state and the driver does not have the documentation to prove it, the vehicle owner has to jump through a few bureaucratic hoops before towing and storage fees billed to them can be returned.

Currently, they must first go to Traffic Court to get the fees lifted by a judge and then must pay a visit to the Bureau of Administrative Adjudication to actually get that money back. That those responsibilities fall to the person whose car was wrongfully taken in the first place adds insult to injury, critics say.

Under Kenney's proposed legislation, reimbursements would be automatic and could be obtained directly from the Philadelphia Parking Authority without the additional trip to the city agency.

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

Don't tread on us

Legislation introduced by Councilman Bill Green that would allow citizens to contest parking tickets over the phone or through the computer will go up for a council vote next Thursday.

▶ The Bureau of Administrative Adjudication expressed concerns that the measures would increase appeals, making it necessary for more staff at a time when it can't afford to hire.

ATTORNEY DANNY CEVALLOS
CO-FOUNDER OF PHILLY-BASED CEVALLOS & WONG

DISGUSTING WEBSITE? YES. ILLEGAL? NO.

From the years 1995 to 1996, I know of no photographic evidence of my existence. Why would I? Unless someone in my circle back then had a disposable camera, then decided I was photo-worthy, then bothered to get the film developed, then handed the picture to me, there would exist no picture of me.

Oh, how things have changed. Most of us have an infant in our family, and it is likely that infant was an Internet star when it was still in the womb, when mommy posted her sonogram on her Facebook wall. It is the Internet that has gone even further and turned every parent into an amateur documentarian/public relations rep. Before Facebook and YouTube, that adorable video of junior dancing in his diapers would have been archived on a spare Betamax tape and tossed into a shoebox in the garage. Now, mom and dad have an outlet for showing their friends and family: posting it on the Internet. For grandmom, grandpa ... and the rest of the world. The dirty, dirty world.

Recently, when a mother in Katy, Texas, posted a video on YouTube of her 2-year-old dancing in his diapers, she must have been confident that others would find this video as adorable as she did. Unfortunately, that's exactly what happened. Initially, the mother was thrilled to see the hits jump from a few to a few thousand. That was until she learned that a private YouTube channel in Sweden was listing her son's video. A private channel that lists videos of nude children. For people who like to look at videos of nude children.

Disgusted? Sure you are. So was mom. She called the FBI. The FBI could do nothing. Here are just a few reasons why. First: It's not too easy to send agents over to Sweden to enforce American law. Second, even if pervy Bjorn, of the Swedish YouTube channel, could be charged with a violation of American law, child pornography requires possession.

Quoted

"Mom thought the Internet community would enjoy the video of her little snowflake as much as she did, so she posted it. She got her wish. It was enjoyed. Really enjoyed."

Sure, the definition has expanded to allow for use of the Internet, but if I add a link pointing to YouTube to my professional website, do I "possess" the videos publicly available on YouTube's website? A weaker argument, but Bjorn is still in the clear. This is because the American definition of child pornography requires visual material depicting a minor engaging in sexually explicit conduct. Nudity alone does not amount to child pornography. In this case, there was not even nudity, just a child in diapers. The fact that someone is turned on by that is gross, but not a crime.

More than anything, the irony here is: The closest anyone came to being involved in kiddie porn was the same person who called the FBI. It was mom's video, that she posted online. That single act — calling law enforcement — demonstrates that much of society has not been properly educated on the Internet before they actually use it. We enjoy the Internet, but we also must accept the risk of using it. Mom thought the Internet community would enjoy the video of her little snowflake as much as she did, so she posted it. She got her wish. It was enjoyed. Really enjoyed. Unfortunately, the pervs and predators will always be out there, no matter how hard we prosecute. Instead of calling law enforcement, from the start, mom should have taken that video and put it in a safe place: that shoebox of videos in the garage.

Romney sorry for bullying in high school

Mitt Romney apologized for pranks that may have pushed the boundaries into bullying, including an incident where he led a group in pushing down a screaming fellow student who was taunted frequently about his suspected homosexuality.

"Back in high school, I did some dumb things and if anybody was hurt by that or offended, obviously I apologize," Romney said in an interview on Fox News Radio.

An article by The Washington Post detailed the incident, saying the student was teased because he was presumed gay. It attributed accounts of the group shoving him and cutting his long blond hair to five fellow students at the all-boys private school.

Romney, 65, said he didn't remember either incident.

"Back in high school, I did some dumb things and if anybody was hurt by that or offended, obviously I apologize."
ROMNEY

"I had no idea what that individual's sexual orientation might be," he said of Lauber. "That was the furthest thing from our minds back in the 1960s," he said earlier.

The account comes amid a national conversation about gay rights, after President Barack Obama announced his support for same-sex marriage BLOOMBERG

US Postal Service losing $1 billion a month in '12

WASHINGTON. The U.S. Postal Service said its loss widened to $3.2 billion in the first three months of 2012 and repeated its warning that it will likely default on payments to the federal government unless Congress passes legislation offering some relief.

The agency, which does not receive taxpayer funds and has been losing billions each year as Americans communicate online, said it lost $2.2 billion in the same period in 2011.

Much of the loss came from setting aside funds for future retiree health benefits, which is required by law. Mail volume fell 4.1 percent to 39.5 billion pieces from a year ago, according to a statement. REUTERS

5% Operating costs rose about 5 percent, in part because the agency is setting aside more for the retiree health benefit payments after failing to make last year's payment on time.

Drop in jobless claims eases labor market fears

WASHINGTON. The number of Americans submitting new applications for jobless benefits edged down last week, easing concerns the labor market was deteriorating after surprisingly weak employment growth in April.

Another report showed the U.S. trade deficit widened in March, with exports surging to a record high and a rise in imports highlighting the economy's firming underlying demand.

The reports indicated the economy remains on a moderate growth path, despite the softer jobs growth. REUTERS

Quickie weekend quote roundup

So much silliness and nonsense was uttered this week, it's impossible to get to it all. (And so much of national importance, too, but that's for another day.) We've done our best to recap in the tiny space afforded us.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

Quoted in brief

▶ Romney: Hair police

"He can't look like that. That's wrong. Just look at him!"

Mitt Romney apologized on Thursday following revelations by the Washington Post that he was a bit of a bully back in his prep school days. The above quote was attributed to 18-year-old Romney by a former peer, who says the presidential candidate gathered a little mob to pin down another boy — one who had been teased over his "nonconformity and presumed homosexuality" — and cut off his apparently inappropriate hair. "I participated in a lot of hijinks and pranks during high school," Romney said in apology, "and some might have gone too far, and for that I apologize."

The recalled incident does seem vicious, but we don't think anyone should be prosecuted for the assorted cruelties of our high school days. Though there does seem to be a line between hijinks and assault, one needn't look nearly so far back in history to find evidence of Romney's repugnance.

"Obama, by all accounts, was a habitual drug user in high school."

The conservative news complex, upset over the Romney bully story, took the opportunity to trot out the follies of Obama's high school days, arguing, again, that he was never properly vetted by the mainstream media. Thus the above quote from Breitbart, and many more: He "tried drugs enthusiastically," Obama wrote in "Dreams From My Father." Sure, that'll sway the youth vote.

"That's not a reason to change thousands of years of thinking about marriage."

We hate ourselves for even giving her ink at all, but Bristol Palin — the inspirational daughter of former big deal Sarah Palin — had some words of condemnation over President Barack Obama's evolution on marriage equality. The quote above refers specifically to a critique of Obama listing the opinions of his young daughters Malia and Sasha as partly responsible for his decision to endorse equal rights.

One point of contention for Ms. Palin: However much she would like to pretend that marriage is this sacred unchanged institution over multiple millenia, that's just not the case. If she wants to return to the traditional ideal she holds so dear, she'll be happy to submit completely to the whims of her father, and later her husband; the first will trade her like cattle, the second will surely treat her as such. Edmund Burke, in 1790, wrote of this splendid tradition: "A woman is but an animal, and an animal not of the highest order."

For what it's worth, Romney is also in the traditionalist camp: "3,000 years of human history shouldn't be discarded so quickly," he has said in describing his opposition to equal marriage rights. It would probably be considered insensitive to his religion to point out that Mr. Romney's family is not exactly known for its adherence to accepted marriage norms, so we'll leave it at that.

"Jonah Goldberg ... has twice been nominated for a Pulitzer Prize."

Political columnist Jonah Goldberg found himself the subject of much Internet mockery this week for falsely padding his credentials on the jacket of his new book. The line in question, repeated above, has been proven false. In a Pulitzer context, "nominated" refers to the top three finalists in each category. What Goldberg really was is a two-time "entrant" — something you too can be for the low price of $100.

"He can't vote, so you'll need to vote for him."

The Washington Free Beacon proves conservatives can be funny with a fake ad for Texas inmate Keith Judd, who grabbed 41 percent of votes in Tuesday's West Virginia Democratic primary.

- From Episode 1, 'Desperate Housewives' touched off a pop culture phenomenon
- The show's cast and creator look back on eight seasons of fabulous outfits (or lack thereof), fractured relationships and the series finale

ABC/MATTHEW ROLSTON

Leaving Wisteria Lane

▶ "Television has changed so much from when we first aired — a scripted show to get 25 million viewers and the critics loved us," reflects star Eva Longoria, far right (her co-stars, from left, are: Vanessa Williams, Marcia Cross, Felicity Huffman and Teri Hatcher). "And then we got some knocks for certain episodes or certain lines," she adds. "I give kudos to Marc Cherry and ABC because they've pushed the envelope." The series finale airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on ABC.

Favorite scenes

One of the most memorable scenes throughout eight seasons of scandal in the suburbs was when Susan (Teri Hatcher) got locked out of her house — naked — in Season 1. Recalling the shoot, Hatcher says, "we always start at 6 in the morning up there on Wisteria Lane on the top of Universal [Studios], the most beautiful place to work in Los Angeles. And it was a new wardrobe girl. Her name was Susan. [I say,] 'Hi, Susan. Nice to meet you. I'm Teri.' [She says,] 'Can we please take some gaffer's tape and cover your nipples and your crotch?' And I walk to the set, and I was in a robe, and it was going to be six hours of shooting this from every angle. It was really a dance, and it was an amazing, amazing experience."

The storyline they didn't think they could pull off

"I'll tell you one thing that I didn't think we were ever going to get away with — because I had fans threatening my life for years," says series creator Marc Cherry. "I didn't think we were ever going to be able to split Tom (Doug Savant) and Lynette (Felicity Huffman) up, because that relationship was so treasured and so a lot of the fans really related to it."

Yet the beloved couple did break up in Season 8, which Huffman calls simply "upsetting." She and Savant didn't get to work together as much, "and working with Doug is one of my favorite things," Huffman says. "But I think [the crumbling of the relationship rings] true and I think that's one of the nice things about the [portrayal of the] marriage." Happily for fans of the couple, it appears they're on their way to reconciliation.

The pop culture impact

It would be hard to imagine Bravo's privileged-ladies-be-having-badly "Real Housewives" franchise becoming such a hit without "Desperate Housewives" paving the way. The catfights, shocking deaths and questionable parenting that took place — in fabulous clothing, nonetheless — on Wisteria Lane drew nearly 24 million viewers in its first season.

"The show became essential watercooler fodder, particularly for women who had just aged out of 'Sex in the City,'" says Dwight DeWerth-Pallmeyer, Ph.D., who is the director of communication studies at Widener University. "While the Wisteria Lane women were easier to identify with than the women from 'Sex'"s Manhattan, their stories were just as exotic, involving murder, kidnapping, extortion, blackmail and other niceties of suburban living. Of course, these women were generally richer than most suburban moms, their lives more dramatic and their physiques more beautiful. But that's the nature of television. It entertains us by holding up models of people we could never really be."

A 'Desperate' wait

▶ Cherry

ABC/BICK BOWELL

The (totally secret) grand finale

Cherry has had a vision of the series' final scenes in his head since the very beginning.

"As always happens with my wonderful writers, I said, 'Well, this is what I want to do,' and then they started adding things," Cherry says. "It definitely got better ... but the general premise has always been the same."

Keep an eye out, too, for a cameo by Cherry himself in Sunday's series capper.

"I'm going to do a Hitchcock," he adds.

TV watch list

'Common Law'

DRAMA. In this twist on the old odd-couple device, two detectives (Michael Ealy and Warren Kole) are forced into couples therapy when their captain can't stand their bickering any longer. Series premiere, Friday, 10 p.m., USA

'Shark Tank'

REALITY. The guys behind Mix Bikini — the kind of brilliant concept that allows women to create their own bathing suit by mixing and matching tops and bottoms — make a pitch to the Sharks. You can buy into the idea with a special offer: Get 20 percent off your order with code METRO at www.mixbikini.com. For every bikini purchased, you'll also be entered to win a 2012 Ford Mix Mustang convertible, and $1 (up to $50,000) will be donated to breast cancer awareness foundation Save the Ta-Tas. Friday, 8 p.m., ABC

'Saturday Night Live'

COMEDY. Will Ferrell returns to his old stomping grounds as host; Usher performs. Saturday, 11:30 p.m., NBC ● AMBER RAY

HOPPER STONE

WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Get out of the dark

No one would call Tim Burton a one trick pony, but he certainly has his schtick, which most of us are well acquainted with: Johnny Depp and Helena Bonham Carter show up. The movies usually look quite dark, save for some neon splashed throughout. There are ghoulish creatures, spiders and macabre items that are destined to show up in knockoff form at a "Hot Topic" near you sometime soon. You can't blame the guy for sticking to what he's good at, but it could be argued that subverting our expectations might be a good career move.

And that suggestion arises because as much as "Dark Shadows" — a retread of the 1960s and '70s soap opera — looks, sounds and feels like Burton's best work, it falls short of the higher benchmarks he's hit with movies like "Edward Scissorhands" and "Batman." Though Johnny Depp, as the 200-year-old vampire Barnabas Collins, has some hilarious lines, the story presents numerous gaps in logic and seems to lose steam by the second third of the film. It's touchingly obvious, in how it ends, that they were hoping for such success with this film that a sequel would be inevitable. We're not seeing that in the cards.

Q&A. A Tim Burton exclusive

METRO: "What single image sums up 'Dark Shadows' for you?"
TIM BURTON: "I made a little vampire."

After interviewing Tim Burton, the director of "Dark Shadows," we asked him to draw something just for us. His doodles have sold out museums worldwide, so put this page on eBay, stat.

Gothic director extraordinaire Tim Burton discusses his remake of campy '60s soap opera 'Dark Shadows' and draws us a sketch

For his latest film, Tim Burton goes back to his childhood with an adaptation of "Dark Shadows," the campy horror soap opera about the cursed Collins family, led by a 200-year-old vampire (played by Johnny Depp in the film). But Burton's film has a stronger comic edge than the series — not that it was necessarily on purpose, he admits.

You set "Dark Shadows" in 1972. Who were you back then?

Well, that was a scary thing. I was at that horrible age when you're going from a kid to a teenager. That is quite a horrible time for anybody's life. And I think that's one of the reasons why I responded to the show — it felt out of place, it felt weird. It's almost less about the show and more about the weird feeling of childhood and growing up in that era, with the music feeling strange, the clothes feeling strange. And I remember feeling it was strange then, and then going back to revisit it, it's still strange.

Comparing the series to the film, when did you make the decision to go for a more comedic tone?

Well, never. That's the scary thing. (laughs) I like things you can't categorize, so I like a mixture. To me, that's natural. From a marketing or studio standpoint, for people who like things categorized — "I want to go see a comedy, I want to go see a drama" — it can be a bit of a problem. But for me, I like that. I never said to Johnny, "Make this funnier." It was just like, well, OK. He makes me kind of laugh, but I don't know.

Dysfunctional families are a regular theme in your work. In your life, how do you try avoid that?

I don't know if you can avoid it, you know? That's the thing. I remember learning early on, because I didn't get along well with my family so I'd gravitate toward other families, but then you get in and you see the dynamic, and every family's the same.

You've been working a lot with writer Seth Grahame-Smith, who wrote "Dark Shadows" and "Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter," which you're producing. What was your draw to him?

I read just the book proposal for "Abraham Lincoln." I don't know, it was late at night, maybe I had too much to drink or whatever, but it just clicked with me, like this is the kind of movie I'd like to see. Because it reminded me of movies that I remember seeing in the '70s, like "Blacula" or "Dr. Jekyll and Sister Hyde," where they take something and kind of f— around with it. And it just made sense. And then when I read it, it was interesting because it's not a joke. It kind of makes sense, really. Lincoln, you look at pictures of him the guy looked like he was up all night hunting vampires.

Esperanza Spalding isn't about being a lone star. Above all, the jazz singer and bassist prizes playing with other musicians and sharing the experience. That includes her special performance of Louis Armstrong's "What a Wonderful World" at the 2012 Oscars in February, too.

"It certainly was special, but one aspect of that was it was a surprise. I went just to play bass. It was supposed to be a collective effort that Hans Zimmer imagined," says Spalding of the musical director. "We wanted it to be everyone just playing together. The camera didn't show that, but that's what I signed up for. Then I was asked to sing with the children's choir. That was such a small part. I had played bass all night in the orchestra with these wonderful musicians," the Brooklyn-based artist says.

Spalding's team-player attitude spreads to her spring tour for her fourth album, "Radio Music Society," when her band includes almost a dozen players. Still, it was her Oscar solo spot that gave her big buzz.

"It was really great exposure for me," she admits. "It was great to be a part of it. I got to hang with Billy Crystal. He did an amazing job hosting; he totally nailed that singing part. He's awesome."

Beliebers, you are all FORGIVEN

Another awards show where Spalding "got noticed" was the 2011 Grammy Awards when she beat favored winner Justin Bieber for Best New Artist. Beliebers in turn hijacked her Wikipedia page and wrote snotty comments in ALL CAPS. But Spalding brushes that off as done with.

"Ah, no one got hurt. It was fine. I'm sure when I was younger there was someone who was my world and I would have been upset like that," she says.

Who? She thinks and thinks, but she's got nada.

"I suppose I was just always into music. I would obsessively go from artist to artist. But I never had posters on my wall. I never had a crush like that." METRO

Interview with a vampire

On 'Blues Funeral,' Mark Lanegan is as dark and snarling as ever

▶ Mark Lanegan plays the TLA Saturday at 7 p.m. For tickets, visit www.livenation.com.

Mark Lanegan is one of music's most formidable frontmen. Standing tall, he performs his dark blues ballads with a deep, gravelly voice and soulful, low-end snarl, constantly gripping the mic stand as if he were strangling it into submission. And when it comes to interviews, he is just as intimidating. Notoriously vague, and downright frustrating to talk to, he is short in his answers, divulging as little as possible.

Known through the '90s as the singer for Screaming Trees, Lanegan has become one of the most prolific survivors to rise from the ashes of grunge. Besides his seven solo records, he's made cameos with Queens of the Stone Age, co-wrote songs with Greg Dulli and participated in unlikely collaborations with the Soulsavers and Isobel Campbell.

"They were something I really enjoyed," he says. "Hopefully that will continue. It may not be the things I worked on before, but with God willing, something else will pop up."

Releasing "Blues Funeral" last month, Lanegan returns to his solo project. Eight years after the release of his previous album, his bottom-dwelling bellow sounds like he's back from the grave to tell tales of death with the delivery of a gospel song sung by a sinner. More electronic than ever, his ballads seem to turn a darker shade of blue — bordering on black. But not to Lanegan.

"I don't know, man, I've been singing about the same stuff for 25 years now," he says.

Quoted

"It's a type of music I've enjoyed listening to, but no more than punk rock or folk music or rock. It's all music."

'Funeral' party

While Lanegan's solo records have always been backed by a collection of friends, this one has a skinnier lineup.

▶ "I made my previous record with Alain Johannes," he says. "And after that I knew I would make the next one with him also. Honestly, we really didn't need anyone but him and Jack Irons, but I had a few other people stop." Most notably Greg Dulli and Josh Homme.

Edward Sharpe and the Magnetic Zeros get 'a little more all-togethery' with new album Singer Alex Ebert on the band's 'aggressive' next album

Getting there from 'Here'

LAURE VINCENT BOILEAU

▶ Ebert, far left, says the Magnetic Zeros aren't really a cult. Listen to more with Ebert on the Metro Monthly Music Podcast, on iTunes now.

When asked how the writing process differed between "Up From Below," the 2009 debut from Edward Sharpe and the Magnetic Zeros, and their upcoming album, "Here," singer Alex Ebert is quick to give credit to the 11 other members of his band.

"It was a little more all-togethery," he says. "We all sat around and worked on arrangements together."

Ebert may have just coined the phrase "all-togethery" on-the-spot, but it's quite an accurate description. A few of the songs on "Here" don't even feature a lead vocal and are more like group sing-alongs.

"As we became a band, over the last three years, doing all these radio sessions, we would sing together in an acoustic environment, really hearing each other," says Ebert.

Like its predecessor, the album is full of fun, funky folk, but with more of a focus.

The theme of "Here" seems to be a sort of reckoning with the evils of the world and finding goodness and spirituality within one's self.

"I don't tend to put out stuff that has a major thematic through-line," says Ebert. "I tend to do what my detractors would call unfocused albums."

Detractors have also used terms like "hippies" and "cult" to describe the big band of Zeros. Ebert doesn't mind.

"A cult is a cult until it becomes popular, and then it's a religion," he reasons. "We do have an ethos, I would say, so in that sense we share some ideas that we tend to agree on, but I don't think that's necessarily any different than a lot of groups of people."

PAT HEALY
pat.healy@metro.us

Far from 'Home'

Because of such a long time touring between albums, Ebert and his crew have come up with so much new material that they have a second new album they hope to release later this year. The style of the as-of-yet untitled album is a departure for the group that became famous for their whistle-along single, "Home."

"It's much more aggressive," says Ebert, "not angsty aggressive but sonically aggressive. ... There is some distortion, which we rarely dabble in."

Spektor as spectator

The singer and piano player talks about having to watch herself online to figure out how her songs go But the upcoming album, 'From the Cheap Seats,' is a much more memorable album than she's letting on

Regina Spektor would really appreciate it if you could put your camera phone videos of her performances up online.

Not only do those videos help her remember how the new songs she is working out in concert go, but they also help her retrieve songs that she forgets how to play.

"In Florida I had to go online and go to YouTube and figure out the chords," she says of a song from her 2009 album, "Far." "I've written so much stuff since then that I've pushed it out of my head."

And as far as the bootlegs of songs in progress go, she says if not for those phone videos, the songs "Patron Saint" and "Open" probably wouldn't have even made it onto her new album, "What We Saw from the Cheap Seats."

"I got lucky that it was up there, actually," she says.

It's hard to believe that the singer would forget the latter song, because its repetition of dramatic inhalation during the chorus seems so instantly memorable. But Spektor does a lot of memorable things to make listeners forget that for most of her album and her live performance it's just her voice and her piano. In the new song, "The Party" she purses her lips together to fake a trumpet part.

"First of all, it's really fun to do," she says. "It's a fun feeling, like even walking around the house being a trumpet. If you bring things from their implied state to a real state, sometimes it becomes better and sometimes, I don't know ... you try to feel what's right for the song."

When Metro spoke with Spektor last week, she was in Florida, where she says she got a sunburn so bad that her skin was the color of the lipstick she usually wears on stage. "In total denial of the fact that I'm a pale Russian Jew, I went walking for two hours in the sun," she laughs, "and then I was surprised to see that I'm completely lobster red and in crazy pain."

'Cheap Seats' manifesto

Spektor has been touring with Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers for the past few weeks, playing large venues that give the title of her album new meaning.

"I love Tom Petty so much that I didn't want to be the person that came and their audience didn't like," she says. "But everyone's been so amazing." As for the "Cheap Seats" title, Spektor says she's been in all kind of seats: "Everything has its beauty, and that's sort of the whole point of the world ... Each thing has its pluses and its minuses."

A Mother's Day feast as pretty as mom

Weekend recipe

Challah french toast with strawberries

Challah bread, like brioche, has an eggy richness that lends itself well to this classic breakfast preparation. While many French toast recipes use cream and an excess of sugar, this lighter version uses whole milk flecked with orange zest and a strawberry-orange topping to add flavor without being too heavy.

▶ Throw in some mimosas to complete.

Ingredients

For the strawberries:

3 pints strawberries (about 1½ pounds)
1 medium orange
2 tablespoons sugar

For the French toast:

1½ cups whole milk
4 large eggs
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon fine salt
Vegetable oil
1 (1-pound) loaf of challah or brioche, cut widthwise into 12 (1-inch-thick) slices
Powdered sugar, for serving (optional)

Directions

For the strawberries:

1 Hull and slice the strawberries ¼ inch thick and place in a medium bowl. Finely zest the orange (you should have about 1 tablespoon). Add half of the zest to the bowl of strawberries. Set the other half aside for the French toast.

2 Slice ¼ inch off the top and bottom of the orange and set it flat on a work surface. Using a paring knife, follow the curve of the orange and slice off any remaining peel and white pith. Working over the bowl of strawberries, slice between the membranes to release the segments or supremes. Squeeze the juice from the membranes, and discard the membrane and peels.

3 Add the sugar to the bowl and stir to combine. Let sit at room temperature, stirring occasionally, until the sugar has dissolved and the strawberries have released some of their juices, at least 15 minutes or up to 1 hour. Meanwhile, prepare the French toast.

For the French toast:

1 Heat the oven to 200°F and arrange a rack in the middle. Place a baking sheet in the oven.

2 Place the milk, eggs, sugar, vanilla, salt, and reserved orange zest in a shallow dish (a 13-by-9-inch baking dish works well) and whisk until the eggs are broken up and evenly incorporated and the sugar has dissolved.

3 Coat the bottom of a large cast iron or nonstick frying pan with a thin layer of oil and heat over medium heat until shimmering, about 3 minutes.

4 Dip a few slices of the bread in the milk mixture, turn to coat, and let the excess drip off. Lay the soaked bread in a single layer in the pan and cook until browned on the bottom, about 2 to 3 minutes.

5 Flip and cook the second side until browned, about 2 minutes. Place the cooked French toast on the heated baking sheet. Repeat with the remaining bread slices. Serve with the strawberry topping (stir before serving) and dust with powdered sugar, if using.

Three books for mom

"Some Assembly Required: A Journal of My Son's First Son" by Anne Lamott with Sam Lamott

It's been said that Anne Lamott set the stage for mommy bloggers with her 1993 best-seller, "Operating Instructions: A Journal of My Son's First Year." Now, 19 years later, she writes (with help from her son Sam) a follow up: "Some Assembly Required," a touching memoir about her grandson Jax.

"Home" by Toni Morrison

Nobel Prize-winner Toni Morrison, returns to the literary world with "Home," a searing novel that follows the broken character of Frank Money, a veteran of the Korean War who returns home to his racist hometown on a quest of redemption.

"Sissy Spacek: My Extraordinary Ordinary Life" by Sissy Spacek

With a folksy writing that recalls her acting style, "My Extraordinary Ordinary Life" is a lovely, tender memoir about Spacek's four-decade-long career. METRO/DR

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

We can't let them finish

CHRISTOPHER PETERSON/GETTY IMAGES

▶ West and Kardashian: How worried should we be?

When Kanye West and Kim Kardashian first stepped out together in March, we weren't too alarmed.

Surely, these two were bound to eventually find each other and combine their powers for some sunbathing-on-the-yacht photo ops.

But now, it seems we could be dealing with something worse than staged summer love: the real deal.

"Kim and Kanye are 100 percent having conversations about marriage," a source tells UsMagazine.com. Another source — let's call this one Worst Source Ever — says that Kim's on board: "They've been friends for years. Kim is ready to give it a try now."

Now, before we go all 2012 here, we really should mention that all of this was started by a quick couple of lines that West rapped in a new Pusha T song: "I saw you in the club in a white dress/ Now I want to put you in a white dress."

For all we know, he could just be referencing some fancy drugs here. Maybe some fancy sex. Possibly both. People who still go outside after 9 p.m. — tell us it will all be OK!

Robert Pattinson needs some encouragement

Robert Pattinson is offered plenty of roles, but he admits he was nervous after signing on to David Cronenberg's edgy "Cosmopolis," where there were no fangs to hide behind. "I spent time doubting myself," he admits. "I was working myself up, asking myself if I was good enough."

Rob, any time you want to get all worked up and need some positive feedback, we're right here.

DON BOWERS/GETTY

▶ No undies were lost in the acquiring of this photo.

Joe Jonas: Fax me

Joe Jonas seems, by all accounts, like a nice young man. Nice enough that we even kind of buy that he's doing Pepsi's "Live for Now" campaign for something other than the money.

"It's cool to be able to go to this platform and check out different pop culture things that are going on," he tells us.

But, moving on, let's talk underwear and flirty faxes.

On his forward fans' actions
"The boldest is probably throwing articles of underwear on stage. That has happened. And then I've had a fan once ask me to punch them, which I thought was crazy, and they were like, 'Well, because then, you know, I'll always remember it.' I'm like, 'You know what? I really don't wanna do that.' That was a female fan. I didn't hit her."

Wait — how many undies are there?
"I don't really collect them. How many has the stage collected? It could be in like the 50 range."

On getting a girl's attention — the non-underwear method
"I faxed somebody once. I was asking somebody on a date. I met her at a store and I sent her a fax that said, "Hey would you like to go out with me, here's my number.' She faxed me back. It was really fun, it didn't work out, but it was fun."

— with additional reporting by Meredith Engel

Talking points

One funny baby on the way

Anna Faris and Chris Pratt are expecting their first child, according to People magazine. The couple, who met on the set of "Take Me Home Tonight" and tied the knot in 2009, have been thinking about kids for a while — and this baby could be just the beginning, to hear Faris tell it. "Chris wants a big family," Faris told E! News last year. "I would love to have eight. I don't think I could handle it, though."

LESTER COHEN/WIREIMAGE

▶ Pratt and Faris

Britney Spears in for 'X Factor'

The deal is done: Britney Spears is reportedly joining "The X Factor" as a judge, joining executive producer Simon Cowell and L.A. Reid on the panel, according to E! News. "There's been a lot of back and forth over the past few weeks as they negotiated the small details, but she's on," a source says. "Britney is beyond excited." Spears will reportedly earn $15 million for her work on the show's second season, though it isn't clear if the deal extends beyond that. The deal now leaves one judge's chair empty, with Miley Cyrus a rumored front-runner for the spot.

Must be nice, guys

Things are different when you're Jay-Z. The rapper was at the Boom Boom Room in New York Wednesday night for a D'usse cognac party when he realized there wasn't a TV to watch the Knicks on. The swanky lounge has a strict policy against TVs but, a source tells Metro, they went and found one for Jay and fellow partiers Pharrell and Jake Gyllenhaal.

Jessica Simpson's boho nursery

It's no surprise that Jessica Simpson turned to a professional when it came to designing the nursery for new daughter Maxwell. And that designer, Rachel Ashwell of Shabby Chic Couture, says the new mom had a good idea already of what she wanted. "Jessica is very pretty and feminine, but she didn't want this to be over-the-top frilly," Ashwell tells People magazine. "The words she used were 'gypsy' and 'bohemian.'"

Out for blood on the red carpet

1: Helena Bonham Carter looked, as always, perfect at the "Dark Shadows" premiere Wednesday night in London. (Don't fight us on this — it's not negotiable, now or ever.)

2: Johnny Depp arrived on the "Dark Shadows" red carpet looking ever so slightly more alive than his character in the film.

3: Nice try, Eva Green, but no one outweirds Depp.

4: In honor of almost-beach time, we give you Jwoww selling her new ab supplement in New York on Wednesday.

5: We'll have everything she's having! Heidi Klum was in L.A. Wednesday to promote her new line of hair and skincare products.

6 and 7: Believe it or not, "Dark Shadows" co-stars Chloe Moretz (15) and Michelle Pfeiffer (54) have close to four decades between them. Hollywood, go think about what you've done.

Criticizing hate just makes you hateful

RE: "READERS FIGHT BACK ON GAY MARRIAGE": Sing the praises of gay marriage — be applauded. Submit an opposing viewpoint — be eviscerated? Why can't David Bowman express his beliefs as freely as you express yours? Christians are told not to shove their beliefs down other people's throats, yet we're bombarded with pro-gay commentary every day. Christians are ridiculed and simultaneously told to respect others for who they are? If you're serious about equality, let your detractors have their say. Otherwise, you're no better than they are. BILL BUSHEY, VIA E-MAIL

David Bowman, you are a true man. As for the biased letters against him, how dare any of you demonize him? The sad reality is, you all do the same thing you don't want done to y'all: Anyone who is against your agenda, you straight-bash, you call them closeted homosexuals. Done to you, it's called a hate crime. RANDALL EPHRAIM, VIA E-MAIL

Brings us closer to dream of equality

RE: "OBAMA IS FIRST PRESIDENT TO SUPPORT GAY MARRIAGE": I'll admit I used to be opposed to gay marriage. Then I came to the realization that no matter my moral beliefs I have no right to restrict the freedoms of two other human beings. Why are we debating this issue in the first place? Because somehow government got its greasy little fingers on regulating marriage. Government should have no involvement with the institution of marriage. KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

To all those who argue about the sanctity of marriage I say why don't they do something to protect the sanctity of marriage by dealing with the issues of abuse, abandonment, adultery and alcohol, four of the main reasons for the high divorce rates we have today, as opposed to denying others the right to get married. BRIAN HOCHBERG, VIA E-MAIL

Although some may criticize Obama for taking too long to express his support for same-sex marriage, I think his evolution on the matter stands as a positive example to the half of the country that still opposes equal rights. It will be the same kinds of individual reassessments and transformations that will slowly but surely bring America closer to its promise of equality for all. DAVID TERHUNE, VIA E-MAIL

If Democrats like Barack Obama really cared about same-sex marriage and rights, they would not be making excuses for the radical Muslim groups like Hamas that advocate killing gays. Liberals should not back Iran or Saudi Arabia, where homosexuality is punishable by death. ROCCO LORE, VIA E-MAIL

To the people in North Carolina: You have no business trying to make the Land of the Free less free. MEREDITH GILBERT, VIA E-MAIL

Bravo, Mr. Obama. You have my vote. Hopefully the day will soon come when the private decision between two consenting adults to get married is no longer a politicized or even a public issue, and people like Mr. Bowman will be regarded in the same way that flat-earthers and Holocaust-deniers are today. KELTON BARNSLEY, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. What develops could help you achieve an ambitious objective that you've been anxious to get a handle on, but once you recognize the right moment you'll have to act quickly. It's likely to be fleeting.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. The best chance you'll get for advancing a personal interest is likely to come about through a new contact. Be alert for just such an opportunity.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. By being a bit more resourceful than usual, you could generate some kind of exciting concept. Don't discount it just because it doesn't stem from your normal way of thinking.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Truly listen to what others have to say, because a casual comment could furnish you with a valuable point of view that you wouldn't have otherwise thought of or considered.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't be hesitant about applying some new and untried procedures to an old assignment. It could turn out to be a time-saver that'll enhance your productivity well into the future.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You have two valuable assets currently: One is your talent for organization, and the other is your ability to effectively delegate who should do what. Don't let these gifts go unused.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. One of your faults can be letting things go until the last minute, and you could succumb to this today. Fortunately, however, you're likely to get things done just under the wire.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Don't even think about throwing in the towel if things aren't going too well. You're likely to surprise everybody, including yourself, by being a remarkably strong finisher.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Your material prospects look exceptionally hopeful, and you could reap gains in several areas in ways you'd least expect. Once opened, these avenues will keep producing.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Even if things don't go exactly as you had planned, the results will turn out to be comparable to those you wanted. Be as flexible as possible and ready to flow with events.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Your shopping instincts will be quite acute, enabling you to spot something of value that everybody else is overlooking. You'll recognize a great buy when you see one.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Chance could bring you closer together with a nodding acquaintance. By spending some time with one another, you'll find a basis for a strong friendship. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

5 Reasons to go to West Philly this weekend

You knew they had great Ethiopian food over there
But you may have missed these other ethnic gems

West Philadelphia has long been known as the place to go for the best Ethiopian food in the city — the only difficulty is choosing between Abyssinia, Gojjo and Dahlak. But there are many more ethnic restaurants west of 40th Street worth checking out. Get started with these five:

▶ Manakeesh

Brown Sugar Bakery & Restaurant
219 S. 52nd St., 215-472-7380
www.brownsugarbakeryandrestaurant.com
Jerked meats (oxtail, beef, chicken and goat) bless the menu of this long-running restaurant that serves cuisine from Trinidad and Tobago. The double (flatbread sandwiches packed with chutneys, chickpeas and a spicy sauce) and the rotis (pastries filled with meat and/or veggies) will change your life.

Manakeesh Cafe Bakery
4420 Walnut St., 215-921-2135
www.manakeeshcafe.com
This Lebanese restaurant takes its name from the traditional flatbread that serves as a vehicle for deliciously spiced meats, vegetables and cheeses. And if baklava could win a Pulitzer, Manakeesh's pistachio version would do so. They plan to expand to the currently vacant adjacent space this summer to offer smoothies and additional dessert and drink options.

Mood Cafe
4618 Baltimore Ave.
215-222-1037
www.moodcafephilly.com
This latest venture by Hasan Bukhari — who owns Desi Village and Desi Chaat House, also both on Baltimore Avenue — specializes in chaat and lassi. Chaat is an Indian street food that combines unique textures and both sweet and spicy flavors using various combinations of chutney, vegetables, meats and lentils. If you eat an especially spicy chaat, the cool, yogurt-based lassi drink will help the burn.

PHOTOS: RICARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Mood Cafe's chaat is worth the trolley ride.

Le Bercail
4519 Baltimore Ave.
267-292-5805
Le Bercail is a fairly recent addition to Baltimore Avenue's always growing scene. The menu boasts Senegalese food, which combines the flavors of West Africa and France, and the portions are huge — don't try to eat the fried tilapia or grilled lamb entrees alone.

Wah-Gi-Wah Halal Restaurant
4447 Chestnut St., 215-921-5597
www.wah-gi-wah-halal.com
Wah-Gi-Wah, which means "spectacular" in Punjabi, offers a large selection of traditional Pakistani dishes, including kabobs, curries and numerous vegetarian options. They serve some of the best fried chicken in the city, but look for it by the name of Lahori Chargha. Each spice-rubbed bird is perfectly crispy and aromatic.

The grape beyond

What we're drinking this week: Spodee, the new bottle from Philly-based label Art in the Age, creators of Root, Snap and Rhuby.

What it is: Spodee's a fortified wine, which you likely haven't sipped before. During the Depression, homemade wines were mixed with fruits, herbs, spices and moonshine to deliver a cheap drunk — think sangria, with less laughing.

What it tastes like: Like its ancestor, Spodee is pretty sweet — spiked wine has to be if you intend to drink it straight. You could, in theory, keep it old-school and drink it barefoot, straight from the bottle, but Spodee is happiest as a mixer.

Mix it with: Spodee likes to mingle. Add it to Coke for a sweet take on the kalimotxo (Spain's red wine-and-cola cocktail), play around with orange juice and citrus to introduce a little pucker or team it up with whisky in warm drinks. Just remember: This stuff is a fairly potent 36-proof invented to get a country through the stock market crash, not a rainy Saturday afternoon.

In the kitchen: At Spodee's coming out party this week, the spirit starred in more than just drinks. Little Baby's Ice Cream whipped up a decadent batch of spiked red velvet cake ice cream, the Smoke Truck rolled out some Spodee-kissed barbecue and it even found its way into shots courtesy of My Jell-O Americans. For more recipes, pay a visit to www.spodeewine.com — and don't be stingy with the boozy cream puffs.

A love song for Kensington

On his first solo album, Chris Forsyth pays homage to the 'hood that changed his perspective

Philadelphia guitarist and 2011 Pew Arts Fellow Chris Forsyth recently signed a two-album deal with the Brooklyn-based label Northern Spy. "Solar Motel," which features a four-piece band and was recorded in Philadelphia at Jeff Zeigler's Uniform Recordings studio, will be released later this year. But first, in July, Forsyth releases his first proper solo album, "Kenzo Deluxe."

The album's named after Kensington, where Forsyth has lived since 2009. "Much of the music was written after taking walks in the neighborhood with my 16-month-old, Lee," says Forsyth. "The diversity in Kensington, and how everything — the good and the bad — is really out in the open here, has really changed my perspective and influenced my music."

On the song "East Kensington Run Down," Forsyth repeats a heavy-boogie riff until slipping into a claustrophobic display of twinkling, stabbing harmonics. And on "Boston Street Lullaby I," named after the street where his family lives, Forsyth plays mesmeric, spaced-out blues. "I was trying to put my son to sleep one night," he says about writing the song, "and so I was just delicately strumming the guitar."

"The diversity in Kensington, and how everything — the good and the bad — is really out in the open here, has really influenced my music."
FORSYTH

Jack Rose, another guitarist who lived in Kensington for many years, also frequently titled his work after the neighborhood (see 2005's "Kensington Blues").

Though Rose died shortly after Forsyth moved to Philadelphia, the two guitarists became friends, and Forsyth was greatly influenced by Rose's work. "There's definitely a subtle tip of the hat to Jack in the title, too," reveals Forsyth.

Terms of endearment

The album's title is borrowed from the neighborhood's abbreviated form, which isn't always perceived as flattering. "'Kenzo' is a term that has mixed meanings depending on who's using it," says Forsyth. "Some use it as a term of derision, but others use it in a positive way — by adding the word 'deluxe' to it, I'm celebrating the neighborhood and the people who live here."

SIXERS 79 | BULLS 78 Philadelphia wins series 4-2

Sixers party like it's 2003 all over again

All-Star hits two free throws to win it ◗ Sixers moving on to the second round of playoffs for first time since 2003 ◗ Fifth No. 8 seed to top No. 1

Philadelphia doesn't have very many fairy tales. But for career-long villain Andre Iguodala (at least locally), Thursday night's remarkable, series-clinching win will have to do.

Iguodala swished two free-throws with 2.2 seconds remaining to give the Sixers a 79-78 Game 6 win. The victory propels them to the second round of the playoffs for the first time since 2003.

Iguodala, the usual whipping boy for Philadelphia fans, shot 61.7 percent from the line during the season. On Thursday, he finished with a team-high 20 points, seven assists and four rebounds.

"This is for the fans. They really deserve this," Iguodala said.

Way back in December, just after the lockout broke, the Sixers clearly stated one simple goal: Win a playoff series.

It was something that they hadn't done since Allen Iverson was here, something that only one of their rotation players (Elton Brand) had ever accomplished. So don't count on any Sixer to make apologies for beating the Bulls without Derrick Rose (knee) and Joakim Noah (ankle).

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Elton Brand takes a shot over Carlos Boozer in Game 6. The Sixers advanced to the postseason's second round.

Especially after the Bulls stormed back from a 12-point, third-quarter deficit to take the lead for the majority of the fourth quarter. With Carlos Boozer (1-for-11 shooting) benched, Omer Asik and Taj Gibson nearly turned into heroes for Chicago. However, Iguodala's late-game heroics prevented that alternate ending from becoming reality.

By capping off the series Thursday night, the Sixers became the fifth No. 8 seed to beat a No. 1 seed in the modern playoff era.

ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

What went right ...

1 Boozer at the bar. Credit the Sixers for shutting down Carlos Boozer. He went 1-for-11 from the field before being benched in the fourth quarter in favor of Taj Gibson.

2 No Noah. Joakim Noah suited up and was "available," but never got in the game. Backup Omer Asik had perhaps the best game of his career, but missed two crucial free throws in the waning seconds.

3 Upsetting the No. 1. The Sixers joined the exclusive club of No. 8 seeds that have beaten No. 1 seeds. Four teams had done it before them, and bettors could have gotten 13-1 on the Sixers before the series started (and before Derrick Rose got hurt, of course.)

▶ Has the Phillies' offense turned the corner?

Phillies can't afford to take Padres lightly

Charlie Manuel likes to say that it's time to make hay when the Phillies are home. Well, the Phillies didn't make hay when they blew three games against the Mets to start a stand at Citizens Bank Park.

Now Manuel, along with GM Ruben Amaro Jr., have laid down the gauntlet, saying that everyone will be held accountable. The Phillies have to get their act together immediately.

The Padres, who will stop into town Friday night for a three-game set, appear to be the perfect tonic. The 8-21 Padres have the worst record in the NL. However, reliever Chad Qualls said to not take his former team lightly.

"You can't take any team for granted, no matter how bad their record is," Qualls said. "You have to be prepared. The Padres have some really good players. I know firsthand, since I played with them. We just have to go out there and play our best baseball."

A new infusion of blood could help. According to recently demoted pitcher Michael Schwimer's tweet, the Phillies will call up relievers Jake Diekman and Raul Valdes, along with slugger Hector Luna. The team doesn't have to make an announcement until Friday, but Joe Savery is in the minors, Laynce Nix might end up on the DL and Brian Sanches could be sent down or released.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Diekman

ON TV FRIDAY

Padres at Phillies, 7:05 p.m. (CSN)

Diekman, who was lights out during spring training, could be a nice addition for a scuffling bullpen. The intense southpaw has struck out 22 in 15 Triple-A innings.

The only reliever who has been able to consistently strike out batters is Jonathan Papelbon. The Phils desperately need a reliever who can put away a hitter via strikeout — and Diekman could be that guy.

Prongs remains Flyers captain until ruled out

GETTY IMAGES

The Flyers officially closed another disappointing season Thursday. With all the uncertainty surrounding Chris Pronger, one of the biggest questions left to ask was: Who wears the C next season?

According to Flyers GM Paul Holmgren, Pronger is the captain, until he says otherwise.

"Chris Pronger is our captain until he's deemed unable to play next year," Holmgren said. "I think too much is made of this captain thing."

If Pronger can't make it back to the ice, Claude Giroux is willing and able.

"If the time is right, yeah, I think so," Giroux said, of wearing the C. "I am not too sure what the plans are." METRO
